- The person I chose for this assignment is someone I personally know. The choice of images says that Jayden is a very outgoing person, with many of the pictures within the specific post consisting of him out doing activities. It also says that he spends a lot of his time with the people that are close to him since the same different people reappear throughout many of the other pictures. The impression I take away from their feed as a whole is that he seems like an extrovert rather than an introvert; not 1 photo from the selected post is of him by himself. Yes, the other post may have mainly pics of him; however, he wasn't the one to take them; the person who did shows up in the last photo. The thing he revealed, while not intending to reveal, is how much he drinks. He wanted to show pictures of him having a good time to show how he's able to have fun in life. However, while doing so, he shows how much he drinks with each post, including alcohol in some fashion. This could lead people to believe that he can't have fun unless alcohol is involved. This isn't the best impression for self-representation.
